

How to Speak a Language Like a Native

No need for CDs, online courses or travel.
Welcome a Language Au Pair into your home.

Welcome a Language Au Pair into your home

There is nothing like learning a language with a native speaker. By hosting a Language Au Pair in your own home, your family can practice all day with a native speaker who is there to support your learning. And because it's in your own home, you can choose how much time to devote to studying and practice. Lingoo.com, the world's biggest language exchange and homestay club, allows you to choose a Language Au Pair for your children, get to know them before you book, and decide when and how long they stay. You can even match interests to make the experience more effective and fun.

How It works

How it works Language Au Pairs are not traditional Au Pairs. They don't undertake household duties; their role is to support your language learning. You also don't pay fees to a Language Au Pair. Some hosts provide a small salary but this is entirely at your discretion. You simply agree to provide warm, welcoming accommodation and meals in return for intensive conversation coaching in the target language. It's the most effective way of brush up your existing speaking skills, gain authentic new skills, and improve proficiency quickly.

Lingoo.com helps you choose the ideal Language Au Pair by matching your interests because learning this way is a social experience. Learning is much faster and more enjoyable when you have fun. In fact, families that host a Language Au Pair through Lingoo.com find their children not only improve their conversation skills but also their speaking confidence in the target language.

How do I get started?

No need for CD's, online courses or travel

To host a Language Au Pair, a child or children must be resident in your home. Start by joining Lingoo.com and creating a detailed personal profile on our site where you can also read lots of tips and advice from other members who have hosted Language Au Pairs. Once your profile is approved, your offer will go live on our site so you can start contacting Language Au Pairs. After initial contact, both parties get to know each other and start discussing the details of the stay. When everything is agreed, you book the Language Au Pair you would like to stay with your family.
